Project Mission and Methods

The purpose of this project is to improve access to electronic health information for North Dakota Native American consumers and health professionals needing consumer health information.

In their effort to provide this access, the project team will:

- Train Native American health care consumers and health professionals needing consumer health information to find reliable electronic consumer health information through partnerships with tribal college library staff.

- Develop a health information web page to prominently promote MedlinePlus, PubMed and ClinicalTrials.gov as well as other web resources applicable to Native American health consumers.

- Provide tribal college libraries with access to a full text health information database.

- Place computer workstations with Internet access dedicated to the Native American consumers and health professionals needing consumer health information in all five North Dakota tribal college libraries.
